Old World nurtures heirloom gardens

EAGLE — Have you ever longed to walk the fragrant paths of history? Or thought about immigrants coming to America, bringing their most treasured seeds and plants with them so they might create gardens reminiscent of their homeland? Are you interested in growing more heirlooms in your garden?

Carmichael

You may want to put Old World Wisconsin on your places-to-visit list. Old World Wisconsin is the Wisconsin Historical Society's largest living history museum situated on 600 acres of lovely rolling Kettle Moraine countryside. The large collection of late 19th and early 20th century homes, barns and businesses gathered from around the state and carefully preserved are fascinating, and the heritage breed animals tended there are fabulous.

But my heart is in the more than two dozen heirloom gardens you will find when you visit.

Based on extensive research, and working with a team of dedicated volunteer gardeners and the support of museum staff, we create and maintain gardens that are historically accurate in design and the selection of plants, carefully representing the time period and ethnicity of the sites they complement. Here you have the opportunity to meet hundreds of varieties of heirloom plants.

If you come to Old World Wisconsin, be sure to visit our Life on the Farms area that includes an 1860s German immigrant farm. Seventy-two individual beds, showcasing a wide selection of vegetables, herbs and flowers, fill the entire front yard. Take note of the charming fences at the 1860s and 1870s German farms. Who would have thought that buckthorn could be so useful!?

In our Scandinavian Homesteads area the 1860s Norwegian immigrant farm garden will feature a collection of dye plants, a stand of the herb Angelica and numerous small fruits.

Don't miss our 1880s Yankee farm in the Crossroads Village area. In the kitchen garden, try your hand using some of our historical garden tools. My favorite is the grub hoe, but you may prefer a gooseneck, Warren or wheel hoe.

Old World Wisconsin gardens invite you to immerse yourself in the sights, sounds, flavors, fragrances and textures of history. The site is open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. Go online to oldworldwisconsin.org for more information.
